“We recently embraced the digital community. It took a while to understand and fully utilize social media because it’s so new and constantly changing. Figuring out how to virtually engage people is a constant learning process and is a really crucial and exciting part of our job as an independent band.” Matt Lipkins 11C, The Shadowboxers

“As a new graduate, I set a personal goal to participate in more alumni events to broaden my career connections. The strategy paid off the first major function I attended. One introduction led to another, and before I knew it, I’d accepted my position to work professionally at Emory. Networking is an invaluable benefit of the Association.” Tania Dowdy 08Ox 10C

“The connections I made and the resources available to me at Emory didn’t stop after graduation weekend. By attending lectures hosted on campus by the Emory Alumni Association, listening to podcasts from Emory University professors, and staying in touch with former classmates through Emory’s extensive social media tools, I’m still engaged and up-to-date with happenings at the university.”

Are you In-volved?

The Emory Alumni Association offers hundreds of ways to get involved with the Emory community, on campus, and beyond. No matter your interest, background, hometown, or availability, the Association can connect you to a vast array of opportunities including mentoring, public speaking, volunteer work, admissions counseling, or career advice.

Lead: One of the most fun and fulfilling ways to get involved with the Association is through regional chapters, interest groups, and alumni organizations. No matter where you live or what you do professionally, you can take part in Emory activities. Become a career contact, plan enrichment events in your city, or organize a gathering for alumni who share your interest. The Association is always seeking alumni leaders to help guide our regional chapters and interest groups. With your help, we will strengthen the Emory community together.

Give: Emory Cares International Service Day is one of the Association's signature programs. Through Emory Cares, alumni, students, parents, and friends participate in a day of service in their local communities. Emory Cares is one of the University's most prominent vehicles for furthering its mission of serving humanity. Emory cares. Do you?

“Emory Cares and Emory Cares Everywhere provide a wide variety of service projects. Together, we help meet the needs of others, alleviate pain, improve the environment, and more importantly, spread hope.”
Renelda Mack 83C
